

Fishing at the Gotland Island

Gotland is one of the biggest islands at the Baltic Sea, situated near the southern shores of Sweden, just in 150 km from Stockholm. When you are here, it is really hard to believe that you are in the Scandinavia. Beautiful coast, which stretches for over 800 km, is famous for its shallow sandy beaches and shoreline with small white pebbles.

Fishing is available all year round here, since the coastal waters don't freeze in winter. Here you can catch pike (all year) and sea trout (October - May). You can also go to one of the lakes full of carps. Fishermen would be happy to know that fish here is large, average size of the sea trout is 2-4 kg, maximum – 8-9 kg.

This is a wonderful place with amazing landscapes and sea views and nice warm climate. Moreover Gotland is known for its rich historical heritage and interesting culinary traditions. During the Viking times Gotland was at the center of the trade routes. You will fall in love with charming medieval Visby with its old houses and narrow streets. The main attraction is an ancient 2 km-long fortress wall. Here you can find more than 90 ancient cathedrals and churches. One must also visit Sea stacks – unique geological forms situated at the island of Fårö.
